Question - 3:

What was a fairly challenging project you managed?

Ans:

During the first year of my career, I was assigned a conference coordination involving 50 local delegates. Just a week before the big day, number of delegates was doubled and international speakers and facilitators were included in the guest list. The budget was raised but due to pressing time it was very challenging to arrange travel and stay including visa clearances of international partners. However I managed it and the conference went exactly the way client wanted.

Question - 9:

What do you feel your weaknesses are?

Ans:

Do not confess to any work-related weaknesses. The interviewer is simply trying to find out where you feel that you need improvement, but do not confess to having any weaknesses. Instead, tell them of a weakness that is actually a strength. Keep your answer very short and to the point.

Question - 10:

What are some of the things that you and your supervisor have disagreed about?

Ans:

Shifting priorities is usually the main reason for any type of disagreement. I may be working on a project that has a tight deadline and my supervisor may pull me from that project to work on something else. It can be frustrating to stop working on a project after I have built up a great deal of momentum only and to switch gears on the fly and start on something completely different.

Question - 11:

Why do you want to leave your job?

Ans:

Avoid making negative remarks about your past or present manager, your fellow employees, or the company you are working for even if they are true. Do not even hint at the fact that you hated your manager and avoid sarcastic remarks. Remember, the interviewer does not know your previous manager or fellow employees.

Question - 13:

How do you plan a project?

Ans:

The first thing I do when making a plan for a said project is to create a feasibility study. The next step is to plan how a project will progress - this includes setting targets and milestones. Distributing responsibilities and allocating resources is next, followed by taking measures to ensure that deadlines are met.

Question - 16:

What is the thing you would like to change about yourself?

Ans:

Sometimes, I feel I am too much of a perfectionist. I am not pleased by things, themes, and arrangements easily and this trait burdens me at times more than the project would if my standards of work were in the same plane with the client's expectations which are almost always less than what I expect of the project.

Question - 26:

Give an example of working in a team with specialists as a project coordinator?

Ans:

If, for example, you have worked in a development company, an obvious example is working closely with the development team to define goals, coordinate resources, solve conflicts, and minimize risks. Project coordinators direct resources and are thus connected to resource managers and the procurement. They work to satisfy quality, deadlines, and budget limitations, and might also work closely with specialists like quality engineers.

Question - 27:

What is a skill that is the most important for a project coordinator's role?

Ans:

Even if you think there is no one single skill that is the most important, name just one.

The interviewer simply wants to see how you think and express yourself. So be short and to the point. An example of one important skill for a project coordinator is multi-tasking, being able to juggle many tasks simultaneously. Or you can talk about teamwork since a coordinator must be able to cooperate with many teams at once and ensure coordinated action between them.
