Question - 4:

Can you perform a role play for us? How will you deal with an unhappy customer?

Ans:

You need to rehearse some role plays as they are quite frequently asked for in the interview for call centres.

The focus of this particular role play should be on:

1. Listening carefully to the customer.
2. Apologising and empathising with them.
3. Re-iterating and confirming your understanding of their problem
4. Offering a solution and confirming if they are happy with this.
5. Thanking the customer for bringing the issue to knowledge
6. Taking the required steps as promised to the customer.

The key attributes of your personality that show off here are - problem solving, empathetic, good communication, calm under pressure, genuine interest in customer satisfaction, result oriented.

Question - 7:

What is the importance of customer service to you? Have you ever walked an extra mile for a customer?

Ans:

The business of call centre runs on customer service. Genuine interest in customer service is one of the most important qualities the interviewers look for in the potential candidates. Being in the field of call centres, customer satisfaction has to be your mantra. To answer this question, you can say something like: "Being in the field of call centres, customer is our king and customer service is our faith and religion. There have been times when I took an extra mile to ensure that my customer is satisfied." Focus your answer on the extra steps you took for customer and how this related customer helped the business.

Question - 8:

Mention the biggest challenge you have faced at work during the last one year?

Ans:

The purpose of this question is not to know about the challenges you have faced but to see your approach to manage them. Pick up an example of a challenge you faced at work and focus your answer on the steps to take to deal with it. Also, discuss about your learnings in the process.

For e.g. "Recently I was asked to recommend and implement the changes in the way the calls are distributed among my team members at the call centre. My team members were quite used to the way they were working and there was a lot of resistance to the proposed changes. I knew that these changes will improve the performance of the whole team so I discussed them with my manager and team in detail. I tried to win the confidence of the team members and explain them that it will be in the interest of all of us and the call centre if we implemented these changes. As they started seeing my point, it became easier to gain their support and the desired outcome. The result is that the customers get a reply faster and the performance of each team member has improved by more than 50%."

Question - 9:

Why are you interested in this role/company?

Ans:

Align your experience and personal qualities with the requirement of the position to answer this question. For e.g. you can say something like this: I have been working in an outbound call centre for last one year. I possess strong communication skills coupled with a high confidence and an ability to deal with customers effectively. These are the requirements of this position. So, I believe that I can perform well in this role and that is what makes me interested in this role.
