Front Desk Officer Interview Questions And Answers Guide.

Question - 1:

How would you coordinate meetings?

Ans:

- * By maintaining an appointment calendar and using Outlook or the company specific portal for managing correspondence
- * Calling the respective personnel for the meetings/appointments confirmation and reminding the management about them
- * Organizing the meeting/conference halls while making sure everything required is functional for example the projector
- * Communicating and adjusting any particulars about the meetings (e.g. time/date) with consultation of the management will be another integral part of meeting coordination.

Question - 2:

What you do when you are asked question by a customer or a visitor that you have no answer for?

Ans:

It is not possible to answer everything every time. If I do not know the answer to something, I simply ask the customer or visitor to wait so I can find out and provide him with the correct answer. I see no shame in asking help for something I do not know.

Question - 6:

How can you handle stressful weekdays and situations or customers that caused you stress?

Ans:

No job comes without stress. If you are a good organizer and planner you can manage things in an efficient way minimizing the levels of stress. Whenever I faced a stressful event or day I became more resilient and better able to handle the same situation next time, which helped me in meeting the deadlines. To beat work stress I relax and recharge myself for over the weekends.

Question - 10:

What traits should a receptionist possess and what makes you suitable for this job?

Ans:

A receptionist gives out the first imprint of the company or organization so he or she should have a pleasant personality along with strong ability to deal with people from varied backgrounds in a polite and helpful manner. Time management and task prioritization are two core elements needed for the job. I have proficient organizational skills and I'm quite comfortable interacting with people. I also have good verbal and written communication skills which render me fit for this job.

Question - 11:

Do you believe in popular belief that a company is judged by the first representative who portrays it?

Ans:

Yes! I do believe in this. While I think that the cliché "first impression is the last impression" is a bit unfair, it fits where the professional world is concerned. People take one look at the reception area or have the first word with a receptionist and they make up their minds about the company. Since there is nothing personal here one has to comply with this rule.

Question - 14:

How to handle irate visitors or customers? Give us an example where you managed to handle one in a successful manner?

Ans:

I believe that arguing with an irate customer is fruitless. I listen to them and try to work out a resolution. There was a particularly angry customer who demanded to see the manager of the company that I was working for. He barged in, banged his fist on my desk and yelled the place down. I asked him calmly if I could assist him and he said no. I requested him to sit down and lower his voice so I can understand his concern properly. He explained his predicament calmly, I took appropriate steps to resolve it and he went back calmly!
