Question - 3:

Why do you want to work in this field?

Ans:

This is an opportunity for you to show your enthusiasm and motivation, as well as a time to demonstrate industry knowledge and the research you've done. We suggests referencing specific areas of the field that interest you and connecting them to your strengths.

Question - 4:

How would your best friend describe you?

Ans:

First, demonstrate personality traits that would be beneficial on a job, such as reliability, and loyalty. "Also, a key trait would be being a good listener - which is crucial for success in friendship and in work,". Second, highlight an interest that shows your non-professional side. This gives the interviewer an opportunity to see another dimension of you, such as being an athlete, artist or movie lover.

Question - 5:

Where do you see yourself working within Company ABC?

Ans:

Make your answer honest but flexible. We suggests saying something such as, "I've really enjoyed learning about Department X and Department Y and feel I could be a strong contributor in either. But, I'm very excited about the organization as a whole and would love to talk about the opportunities you have in other areas, as well."

Question - 6:

Explain a time when you had to be a leader?

Ans:

Tell a story about your leadership experience that follows the STAR format: situation, task, action, result. Before your interview, prepare at least five "short stories" that are around 60 to 90 seconds in length. These stories should use the STAR format to expound on your past experience.

Question - 7:

Tell me about a time when your morals were questioned?

Ans:

"Keep it to a simple example, about lying for someone else, about someone else being dishonest on the job and how you handled the situation," a student employer counselor at previous company. The employer is checking how you handle yourself when asked an unanticipated question, not trying to see if you share the same values.

Question - 8:

Tell me where do you see yourself in next five years?

Ans:

Demonstrate how this position relates to your goals. Sharit says employers want to see you're committed to their organization so your response should include a higher-level position within the organization. "Make sure your goals are realistic - you cannot be director within a year. Don't say that you plan to apply to grad school this year and go full-time next year,"

Question - 9:

How would you sell a particular product to a customer?

Ans:

Employers ask this question when they aren't sure about someone's sales potential. We used this question as an interviewer; she would hold up a pen and say "Sell me this pen." Successful interviewees should pick up the pen and start, "So I understand that you are interested in buying a pen. What are you looking for?" Then get creative and talk about aspects of the pen like the strong, smooth line of the pen and the range of colors.

Question - 10:

Tell me what are your weaknesses?

Ans:

You need to acknowledge a weakness! The key is knowing your weakness and demonstrating how you are improving on it. For example, if you say I am a perfectionist and have difficulty delegating, you need to give an example of how you're working on the issue: I have been working on this issue and have begun to delegate to my staff as .... (e.g., leader of a club, editor of a paper), making sure they have clear directions from me. I've found that this approach provides the advantage of giving my staff more responsibility and freeing me up to work on other projects.

Question - 15:

Tell me in one minute or less why I should hire you?

Ans:

Match your relevant qualifications with the job description. For example, for a sales job, ABC suggests saying something like, "I've been preparing myself for a sales position through my courses, part-time job, an internship, and campus activities." You should then describe in detail what you learned from each one. Finally, BC says to sum up everything with a statement such as I feel confident that I would excel in this position, which is a perfect match with my background.

Question - 16:

Why do you want to be a journalist (or something else) despite the current state of the industry?

Ans:

This is a perfect opportunity to show you've done research on where the opportunities exist in the field. For example, the investment industry is weak, but there are many opportunities in corporate finance. There are always opportunities for the best candidates, so demonstrate why you would add value to the company through your education and experience.

Question - 18:

What are your plans after graduation?

Ans:

If this question is asked at an entry-level job interview, reinforce your interest in the position with a statement like, "I'll take a moment to celebrate and appreciate my graduation. But, I'm looking forward to starting my professional career and this position would be a great opportunity for me to do that." But if the question is asked at an internship interview, the interviewer may be exploring your dedication to the field or your long-term interest in the company. Make sure your answer incorporates your interest and enthusiasm for both.

Question - 19:

What are 3 characteristics about you that would make you a good employee?

Ans:

Take the job requirements into consideration when choosing your three characteristics. For example, if you were seeking a job as an actuary, Jones says you could discuss your aptitude for math as reflected in your major GPA of 3.6. Your second characteristic could be your interest in business, as shown by your coursework in accounting and finance. Finally, highlight campus involvement and say something like, "I have proven leadership experience, showing my potential for advancement after proving myself," says Jones.

Question - 21:

Tell me who is your role model?

Ans:

Talk about someone who you aspire to be or has qualities you hope to possess. "You could say Michelle Obama and this could show that you admire her for her own career, her strength or even that she's not afraid to show she's fit," says Laura Lane, an assistant director of career services at previous company. Many students say their role model is their mother or father. Though parents may not be as effective as a public figure, talk about them if it is the truth, says Lane.

Question - 27:

Explain a typical work week for you?

Ans:

Interviewers expect a candidate for employment to discuss what they do while they are working in detail. Before you answer, consider the position you are applying for and how your current or past positions relate to it. The more you can connect your past experience with the job opening, the more successful you will be at answering the questions.

It should be obvious that it's not a good idea talk about non-work related activities that you do on company time, but, I've had applicants tell me how they are often late because they have to drive a child to school or like to take a long lunch break to work at the gym.

Keep your answers focused on work and show the interviewer that you're organized ("The first thing I do on Monday morning is check my voicemail and email, then I prioritize my activities for the week.") and efficient.
