Question - 14:

Tell me you are working at a large event where there is a large, rowdy crowd, what steps could you take to make sure the event does not become chaotic?

Ans:

In that type of setting, the most important thing to do is be observant, alert and proactive. With larger crowds, issues have the tendency to escalate quickly because of the magnitude of the crowd. To avoid that I would assess and tend to smaller problems as soon as they arise. Additionally, when the crowd is moving it's crucial to maintain the flow and direction to keep things running smoothly.

Question - 21:

Explain me about a time when you successfully dealt with an angry member of the public not with physical force, but with only your words?

Ans:

Draw from your past experience to describe how you have dealt with a similar instance. The interviewer is getting a sense of how you respond to security threats. "Before entering into the security field, I worked in customer service jobs. It allowed me to hone my people skills and learn to communicate effectively. In my last position as a retail security officer, a customer got extremely upset. She began yelling and damaging clothing displays. I allowed the woman to explain herself and voice her concerns. Then, I assured her that the matter would be handled, but the best way to get the issue resolved was by remaining calm and discussing the situation with the store manager."

Question - 23:

Explain me what are your key strengths?

Ans:

This is another most common question in any HR interview. The idea here is to understand how much you know about yourself and how confident you are about your strengths.

- * Just stay positive. Even a simple answer like "I am a very positive person" is good enough.
- * You can also change this as per the requirement of the interview. Knowing a bit about the profile you are being interviewed helps as well.
- * Explaining your strength with an experience from the past is desirable here.

Question - 29:

Tell me what's your greatest weakness?

Ans:

This was one of the more popular questions raised real-time. Talking about a weakness is tricky. The safe route might be to go with something completely inoffensive - like the cliché "I'm a perfectionist, I have to get it right all the time!"

Recruiters know when you answer the question by picking a strength and downplaying it into a weakness, or picking a textbook "weakness." Call a spade a spade, and describe a true opportunity area.

Sincerity plays a key role here. Really think about what you need to improve on, identify how you're getting over it, and if that paved the way for some other skill to be developed.

One might say, for example, that he isn't a great listener - but discovering that led him to be more conscientious asking for feedback.

Question - 34:

Tell me how do you decide when you need to use your weapon to defuse a situation?

Ans:

This answer is extremely clear cut for me. A weapon should be used for the sole purpose of a life-threatening situation and as a last resort. My main goal is to protect myself and everyone around me, even those that appear to be a threat to themselves. If I come across a case that is non-fatal and there are other means of settling the problem, then resorting to the use of any weapon is unnecessary.
