My memorable Journey:
Actually My brother had some urgent business at Jaipur. He wanted to reach there soon. So, he decided to reach there soon. He wanted to take me along. We packed a small bag and went to the Airport.
There were a number of airport at the airport. Many people had come to see off their relatives and friends. We entered the aeroplane. This was my first experience of traveling by air. The aeroplane took off in the air. It flew higher and higher. I felt little giddy. I looked through out the window. Everything looked very small. Big trees looked very small. Huge building looked like small huts. The big river looked like a snake. Now Jaipur was in sight. The aeroplane started flying down. It landed at Jaipur airport. We thanked god that we had landed safely. It was my one of the memorable journey I ever had in my life.

Question - 4:
What is a Customer service?

Ans:
Customer service is the fulfilling right expectations of customer when he buys the product. When customer buys any product he may not be aware about the use of product or may he gets some issues with the product. So resolving queries or educating about product this could be the goal of a customer service. It is as simple as the example of our own. When we buy any product we get queries, and if there is no one to resolve our queries, we either throw the product away or get frustrated. A good customer service is a good way to grow the business.

Question - 21:
What does a call center mean to you?

Ans:
This seemingly harmless question is a way for your prospective employer to gauge how serious you are, and what your commitment to the job will be. This standard question should be replied to earnestly, and it's important not to give the impression that you are planning to leave as soon as a better opportunity comes along. Interviewers are usually looking for employees that will stay with the company for a long time and make a career out of their job.

Question - 22:
Which one do you think web or voice suits your qualifications better?

Ans:
If you are inclined towards one aspect, either web or voice, then there is no harm in telling your employer about your preference. They generally have enough vacancies in both and will hire you if you are good, irrespective of what you say here. Just make sure that you have a good reason for choosing one over the other.

Question - 23:
Are you confident of your communicative skills in convincing people?

Ans:
Point number one-please do not answer in negative to this question—even if you are an absolute failure at convincing people to do anything. The answer has to be:“Yes, I think I can easily convince people.” Then tell them how you convince people. Reading up on this aspect will help not only frame a good response to this question, but will also help you in doing your job better.

Question - 24:
Will you be comfortable working in different shifts?

Ans:
Yes, I can. I might have difficulties at the beginning, but I am sure that my body will easily adjust to working at odd hours. Staying up throughout the nights is not a problem for me. You can take this as an opportunity to talk about how well suited for the job you are by saying things like:
* I am enthusiastic and energetic about my work.
* I am very proficient and hard working.
* I can work efficiently and with the same amount of zeal and energy at any time in the day.
* I can strive hard to achieve my goals and at the same time manage other aspects of the job.
One thing to keep in mind while praising yourself is to avoid the use of superlatives like 'extremely' hardworking, the 'best' at xyz, the 'most' efficient etcetra. Selling yourself is good, but the subtler the trumpeting, the better it is.
