Barrel Washer Interview Questions And Answers Guide.

Question - 1:

Explain me why do you want to leave your current company?

Ans:

One that focuses on the positives about why the job they're applying for offers them better learning or career opportunities, chances for advancement, aligns more closely to their long term goals, or is a better fit for them.

Question - 2:

Tell something about yourself?

Ans:

An answer that gives the interviewer a glimpse of the candidate's personality, without veering away from providing information that relates to the job. Answers should be positive, and not generic.

Question - 3:

Do you know how does the Internet work?

Ans:

If you're interviewing for a tech position, I really hope you do know how the internet works.

You don't want to spend 30-plus minutes explaining how the intricacies of how the internet works. In my opinion, this kind of question is trying to gauge your interest, passion, and, of course, knowledge.

Do you mostly talk about the server side? Do you focus on the client side only? How you talk about the internet can show not only your knowledge, but also your passion and where your interests lie. For instance, if you spend 30 seconds talking about servers but then four minutes describing how webpages are displayed in the browser, that probably means you are much more passionate about the client side.

Question - 5:

What are your strengths as Barrel Washer?

Ans:

The consensus is to go for quality, not quantity here. Candidates should give a short list of strengths, and back each one up with examples that illustrate the strength. Also, they should explain how these strengths will be useful in the job you're applying for, and use this question to say something interesting about themselves.

Question - 7:

Tell us can you instruct someone how to make an origami 'cootie catcher' with just words?

Ans:

The interviewer knows that nobody knows what a 'cootie catcher' is. (If there even is such a thing.)

Again, the reason why these kinds of questions get asked is to see how you think on your feet. Do you become confused, or upset? Do you try to answer in a logical manner?

In this instance in particular, an interviewer is also trying to measure communication skills. How well can you describe your concept? Do you break it down into clear steps? Do you stay on track, and do not jump around? It's not your answer that matters. It's how you come about it, and then explain it.

Question - 8:

Explain me how do you feel about those jokers at Congress?

Ans:

One thing is certain: This is not the time to get into a political discussion. Rather, this question is probably aimed at seeing how you play 'politics.' (Because we all know workplaces are political.) I would recommend saying something neutral, like how everyone wants to represent their constituents as best they can.

Question - 30:

Best Brainteaser Interview Questions:

Ans:

Brainteaser questions have become popular for interviews in recent years, as word has gotten out that top tech companies such as Apple, Google, Microsoft and IBM have used this type of question at one time or another.

Companies like Google aren't using these questions so much any more, but many companies, are, and it may be good to prepare for them. The key to these isn't so much getting the exact answer, as it is showing how you would come up with an answer.

Here's a sample of 12 of the best and most difficult.

1. How many street lights are there in New York City?
2. How many gas stations are there in the United States?
3. How many golf balls can fit in a school bus?
4. How much should you charge to wash all the windows in Seattle?
5. Why are manhole covers round?
6. How many times a day does a clock's hands overlap?
7. How would you test a calculator?
8. Describe the internet to someone who just woke up from a 30-year coma.
9. How much does the Starbucks in Times Square bring in, in annual revenue?
10. You are shrunk to the height of a nickel and thrown into a blender. Your mass is reduced so that your density is the same as usual. The blades start moving in 60 seconds. What do you do?
11. What is the air speed velocity of an unladen swallow? ;)
12. How many golf balls are there in Florida?

Question - 31:

Tell me why are you interested in working for [insert company name here]?

Ans:

One that shows they've done research on the company, and are truly excited about specific things they can do at the job. This not only shows enthusiasm for the work and basic preparation skills, gives you clues about the cultural fit.

View All Answers

Question - 32:

Tell me how much should you charge to wash all the windows in Seattle?

Ans:

The interviewer knows that nobody knows how many windows are in Seattle. However, the reason why these kinds of questions get asked is to see how you think on your feet. Do you become flustered? Do you try to answer in a practical way? If you get one of these questions, relax. Take a moment. And try to answer in a logical way.

It doesn't matter if you're way off. What matters is that you remained calm, and answered pragmatically.

For instance, estimate how many windows are in Seattle by guessing the population of Seattle. From that infer the number of households and vehicles. And then guess the price of how much it would cost for one window-maybe $10 per window. The rest is simple math. Again, it's not your answer that matters. It's how you come about it.
