Company Physician Interview Questions And Answers Guide.

Question - 1:

Explain me what is your professional experience as a doctor?

Ans:

Another important job interview question that is commonly asked to the doctor is about their qualification. To become a doctor you have to go through a tough process of studies. You should try to get admission in medical colleges. You shall be able to give a detailed explanation of your degrees. Also, you should give details about any field if you have done specialization in.

Question - 2:

Explain me what would you describe as your biggest weakness?

Ans:

This is probably one of the most dreaded questions in a job interview. Answering this question requires self evaluation and honesty. Remember, whatever weakness you decide to share, make sure it is not a key characteristic needed to perform your job as a physician.

Question - 3:

Explain me tell us why are you leaving your current job?

Ans:

Truthfulness and tact is key in answering this question. You should always detail the reasons for looking for work outside of your current employment in a positive context. You may want to find new challenges or seek career advancement. You may also reveal that you wish to work for a more secure organization with better benefits. While answering the question, it pays to refocus the inquiry by highlighting why the available position you're applying for can provide what was lacking in your previous job. But take particular care not to talk badly about a current/previous employer.

Question - 4:

Tell us what are your salary expectations as Company Physician?

Ans:

It's best that you don't talk about your salary expectations during an interview. However, if you are asked about it, you must be cautious in providing a specific figure. If you ask for an amount that's too high, you might be eliminated from consideration altogether. If the number is too low, you might give the impression that your talents are not of sufficient value. If it cannot be avoided, the best possible answer to this question is to respond that you are looking to receive a competitive salary that matches your expertise, experience and anticipated workload.

Question - 5:

Explain me do you as a doctor have any weakness or strength?

Ans:

All of us have some weakness or strength and same goes to the doctors too. You should never hide your weakness, if any, from the interviewer. Say if you can do all your duties well, but it will be difficult for you to be available for night shifts due to same personal problems. Also, any strength can act as a benefit for you. Like you are a cardiologist, but you can also perform surgery in case of an emergency. In this way you can save the life of a patient.

Question - 6:

Tell us how do you approach dealing with an angry patient, and why?

Ans:

Knowing how you will handle a difficult situation will tell the interviewer if you have the the right attitude for this job. Being a physician means you have to deal with people from very different backgrounds and with varying personalities. Give the interviewer an example of how you would handle an angry patient.

Question - 7:

Tell us what are some of your notable achievements?

Ans:

Nobody enjoys a braggart but if you're asked about your achievements, you should not hide them. Detailing awards and scholarships that you have received and seminars/conferences that you have attended is not only to subtly suggest that you're an exceptional doctor. It is to emphasize your serious dedication to the profession.

Question - 8:

Tell me how do you prevent committing medical malpractice?

Ans:

Like the previous interview question, this one is also specific to physicians. When answering questions like this one, you must stress how serious and dedicated you are when treating your patients. This means having extensive knowledge of the patient's condition which you will learn along the way through patient communication and the processes of conducting examinations. You must also mention that in cases where you are uncertain how to proceed with treatment, you are always mindful to consult with other doctors and even refer the patients to specialists outside your field if necessary.

Question - 9:

Explain me what are your achievements till date?

Ans:

You should never hide about your achievements from the interview panel. List down all the awards that you have achieved for your hard work. If there are scholarships that you have won, then list them down in your award list. Never forget to list the seminars and conferences that you have attended. Any workshops that you have conducted for the betterment of your patients. If you are a member of a faculty in any of the medical institutes or called for taking lectures, listing all these will highlight your achievements and will show the interviewer your dedication about the work.

Question - 10:

Can you explain what is your planning about the future?

Ans:

If you are a doctor then you always dream of something big in your lifetime. You should explain the interviewer about your future plans of opening a hospital in the country with all the latest medical equipments from all around the world. Also, how you are going to invest your entire plan, whether through loans or any other backup that you have.

Question - 11:

Tell us why did you choose to become a doctor?

Ans:

This is one of the most common questions asked to physicians during interviews. The medical profession is held in high regard by many and it is perceived as a noble career path. However, some also see it as a lucrative livelihood. Employers want to hire physicians who regard the profession as the former. Interview panels at hospitals do not enjoy hearing doctors say that they've joined the profession for the money. A satisfactory answer would be to say earnestly that you desire to help other people by dedicating yourself to preserving human life.

Question - 12:

Explain one of the most important things physicians have to pay attention to is patient confidentiality. Tell me about a time you were trusted with confidential information?

Ans:

Working within the medical career field you are trusted with sensitive information each day. Don't fall into this trap and answer this question with a story containing confidential information, people will view your answer negatively and view you as not being trustworthy. If you choose to tell about a situation be sure to be vague and not use names or too many details.

Question - 13:

Tell us what is your ability to face the challenges both medical and personal?

Ans:

As a doctor you have to face many challenges daily. So, you must highlight your ability to tackle these challenges very carefully and intelligently rather than getting hyper. Dealing with challenges faced by a doctor, if not handled properly can lead to death of the patient. Show your power, making decisions in situations of emergency rather than losing control.

Question - 14:

Tell us your way of handling emergencies and the workload:

Ans:

For answering such medical interview question, you should explain the interviewer that, in case there is a medical emergency in the hospital your first step will be to save the patient rather than getting engaged in the formalities. As a doctor you know your duties and will try your best in doing them. You will try to arrange all the specialists if required. Informing the police after taking care of the patients will be your duty.

Question - 16:

Can you tell us why should our hospital hire you?

Ans:

Hospitals look for talented doctors that could work well with others and serve patients well. Their medical team must also preserve the hospital's goodwill and support its policies. You must take note of all three when coming up with the answer for why you are the perfect fit for the available position. Be careful about overselling yourself. You must be realistic with your motives and what you can bring into the fold.

Question - 39:

Tell us what characteristics do you think are important for healthcare professionals to possess?

Ans:

There is more than one reason for asking this question. First, the interviewer wants to know what qualities you think are important to perform this job. Second, and most importantly, your answer will tell the interviewer if you hold yourself to the same standard as you do others. If you want to see certain characteristics in your peers, you should be able to tell the interviewer with confidence that you possess those traits, as well. This question is one that interviewers often use to distinguish sincerity on the part of the candidate.

Question - 43:

Explain me are you open to working on rotation or split shift schedules, if required for this position?

Ans:

Being flexible with the schedule you are willing to work is always a plus. However, many people work more than one job or have a one parent home which requires them to have a flexible schedule. Others simply prefer to work one shift rather than another. Being upfront with the interviewer about what schedule suits your preference could help prevent conflict later on. It is easier to plan a schedule you can agree on than it is to fix problems that arise due to fear of being rejected. Be honest and direct.

Question - 44:

Explain me how do you handle emergencies?

Ans:

This question is among those that apply specifically to physicians and you should anticipate that a few of these will be asked by the hiring panel during the job interview process. Unlike other interview questions, this one is more objective so you must respond to this question correctly by leaning on your knowledge. Your response should always indicate that the priority during emergency situations is to save the patient's life. You must also stress that you will fulfill all your duties and make all the necessary arrangements if specialists are needed to tend to the patient. If the police are involved, it will also be your responsibility to inform them of developments regarding the patient while taking particular care not to breach any doctor patient confidentiality agreements.

Question - 45:

Explain me why did you choose your field of specialty?

Ans:

There are various specialties in the medical profession and potential employers are generally interested in understanding why you gravitated toward your particular field of specialty. It pays to be sincere but keep in mind that the element of caring for and preserving a patient's life must be the very core of your response. You should also highlight your scientific curiosity about the field and what you wish to contribute to it through your medical practice and research.
