Question - 21:

Tell us are you able to stay on task for long periods of time?

Ans:

Because a lifeguard must watch the water for monotonous periods for the infrequent episodes requiring the rescue or assistance of patrons, employers want to be sure they are hiring someone who will not become easily bored or distracted. You can answer this question by citing your discipline in sports or academics as a way to demonstrate your ability to focus. Provide concrete examples of when your prolonged dedication to a task resulted in favorable results. Tell a specific example of your dedicated focus for over an hour's period of time. Describe how your commitment to excellence helped you stay on task and resist the urge to become bored or distracted. Avoid vague answers that don't really tell the hiring manager what you are like. If you have previous lifeguarding experience, you could draw from those experiences to describe your focused and attentive attitude.

Question - 25:

Explain what relevant experience do you have?

Ans:

Hopefully if you're applying for this position you have bags of related experience, and if that's the case you should mention it all. But if you're switching careers or trying something a little different, your experience may initially not look like it's matching up. That's when you need a little honest creativity to match the experiences required with the ones you have. People skills are people skills after all, you just need to show how customer service skills can apply to internal management positions, and so on.

View All Answers

Question - 26:

Tell us what qualifies you for this position?

Question - 31:

Tell us if your previous co-workers were here, what would they say about you?

Ans:

Ok, this is not the time for full disclosure. If some people from your past are going to say you're a boring A-hole, you don't need to bring that up. Stay positive, always, and maybe have a few specific quotes in mind. "They'd say I was a hard worker" or even better "John Doe has always said I was the most reliable, creative problem-solver he'd ever met."

Question - 32:

Can you tell me why are you looking (or why did you leave you last job)?

Ans:

This should be a straightforward question to answer, but it can trip you up. Presumably you are looking for a new job (or any job) because you want to advance your career and get a position that allows you to grow as a person and an employee. It's not a good idea to mention money here, it can make you sound mercenary. And if you are in the unfortunate situation of having been downsized, stay positive and be as brief as possible about it. If you were fired, you'll need a good explanation. But once again, stay positive.

Question - 37:

Tell us how will you balance meeting the pool's safety standards with providing excellent customer service?

Ans:

As a lifeguard, you will be responsible to your employer to see that all patrons follow the pool policies and safety rules. Your leadership skills and ability to take control of potentially dangerous situations are key. Find a story from your previous work or school experiences that can highlight both your ability to see the other person's point of view and to adhere to company policies. The hiring manager wants to gauge whether you will have the confidence to enforce the pool's safety rules or if you will be negligent of the pool policies. Choose an example which shows how you understand the reasons behind the rules. That will allow your potential future employer to see that you could enforce the rules for the right reasons. This question is also your opportunity to describe your commitment to customer service. You could, perhaps, describe the tone with which you would choose to address a patron who repeatedly ignored pool rules or engaged in unsafe behavior in the pool. Your approach should balance a firm commitment to safety as well as an empathetic understanding toward a patron or parent of a patron who may be upset due to such a confrontation. Acknowledge that you are willing to refer to management or company policy to tactfully and thoughtfully resolve the issue.

Question - 43:

Now let's talk about salary. What are you looking for?

Ans:

Run for cover! This is one tricky game to play in an interview. Even if you know the salary range for the job, if you answer first you're already showing all your cards. You want as much as possible, the employer wants you for as little as you're willing to take. Before you apply, take a look at salary.com for a good idea of what someone with your specific experience should be paid. You may want to say, "well, that's something I've thought long and hard about and I think someone with my experience should get between X & Y." Or, you could be sly and say, "right now, I'm more interested in talking more about what the position can offer my career." That could at least buy you a little time to scope out the situation. But if you do have a specific figure in mind and you are confident that you can get it, I'd say go for it. I have on many occasions, and every time I got very close to that figure (both below and sometimes above).

Question - 44:

Explain where else have you applied?

Ans:

This is a good way to hint that you're in demand, without sounding like you're whoring yourself all over town. So, be honest and mention a few other companies but don't go into detail. The fact that you're seriously looking and keeping your options open is what the interviewer is driving at.

Question - 45:

Tell us what determines proficiency?

Ans:

The interviewer should look for the following answers: Being proficient means having had the proper training in different sizes, design [e.g., transit vs. convention], equipment, [e.g., wheelchair lifts, tie downs, emergency exits], gauges and controls, and so on before being allowed to transport students on any highway unsupervised.

View All Answers

Question - 46:

Explain me what is your experience with CPR and first aid?

Ans:

This question is fairly straightforward. The interviewer wants to know whether you are currently certified in CPR and AED and whether you have had and on-the-job experience using that certification. If you are not certified, you should get certified before applying. Then, during the interview you can describe your credentials and elaborate on the personal qualities you possess which make you a good candidate for the job. Anyone can get CPR certified, so demonstrate what it is that makes you uniquely fit for the position. Maybe it's your compassion, your physical fitness, or your specialized knowledge of performing CPR on infants and young children that sets you apart. Consider what makes you uniquely qualified, and use that information to help the hiring manager see you as the best applicant above and beyond your training in CPR.
