Question - 8:

Do you know what opportunities are there for professional development?

Ans:

Doesn't necessarily mean you won't be comfortable or happy in the position offered. But does mean that you're hungry. That you would be willing to work up in the company. And that they might be hiring someone who will go the distance with them. Try to emphasize your enthusiasm about the company itself.

View All Answers

Question - 9:

Tell us how would you measure success in this role?

Ans:

The interview is actually the prime time to ask this question. Again, it shows your forward thinking and your desire to excel and exceed their expectations. It also gives you a great blueprint for how to render yourself an asset as quickly as possible-much better than a vague idea of the tasks required and the typical workload.

Question - 10:

Tell me how would your co-workers describe you as Truck Driver?

Ans:

Questions such as this one are asked with the aim of getting you to discuss some of your qualities, perhaps hidden that you wouldn't have mentioned if you weren't asked.

"Well, my colleagues will tell you they can count on me. They will tell you that I am a team player and someone they enjoy working with."

Question - 11:

Do you know what Are The Major Transportation Issues In Warehousing?

Ans:

The major transport issues in warehousing are

- * Costs
- * Delays
- * Tracking and communications
- * Warehouse Safety

View All Answers

Question - 12:

Can you explain me what was the work environment like?

Ans:

It's stressful. There's a lot of hours one day, like 14 hours and 2 new jobs and physically demanding. Other days, nothing. It's not very reliable but during the summer, you're going to get tons of hours. During the winter, you might as well find another part-time job.

View All Answers

Question - 13:

Tell me what do your most successful hires usually do in their first month with you?

Ans:

You're not just going to get the job and slouch into complacency. You're there to slay. This shows you want to hit the ground running-and that you're eager to help. As a bonus, you might get some insight into the company's as-yet-unknown quirks.

View All Answers

Question - 14:

Tell me do you have any questions or concerns about my experience?

Ans:

Seems like cheating. But it's a great way to give yourself a moment to explain any holes in your resume or further justify the ways in which you might meet the listed job requirements. It's a great way to give one last defense of yourself before the decisions are made. And, who knows, you could just assuage someone's concerns enough to make them hire you.

Question - 15:

Can you describe a typical day in your current job as Truck Driver?

Ans:

As much as you want to sell your self in a good light, do not make the mistake of exaggerating your current position. Add some of your routine tasks to make it realistic and don't neglect things like paperwork. Try to be in the interviewers shoes as you answer this question. A job you have been doing for years should be part of you already and as such; you must know all the tasks you undertake. Try to show them that you plan well before you begin work and after you attain your goals, you review the process to see how you could be more efficient.

Question - 17:

Can you please explain me what was your favorite part about working there?

Ans:

The tips were great. You get to meet a lot of cool people, customers. If you're a college student and need furniture for your apartment, you get a lot of free furniture doing move jobs because sometimes just can't move stuff and they just say "If you want it, you get it." The pay isn't too bad.

View All Answers

Question - 18:

Tell us what are some biggest challenges that might need to be faced?

Ans:

Whether you ask about the team's challenges-i.e. recent challenges they may have faced and how they handled them-or about obstacles or roadblocks that might come up for you in your new position, this shows that you've got your eyes open and are ready to troubleshoot and make sure you transition in and start succeeding without running into any foreseeable hurdles.

View All Answers

Question - 19:

Please explain why are you interested in this job/working for this company?

Ans:

Be prepared to give specific answers about why you want this job and why you think you'll be good at it. Research the organization ahead of time and discuss something about the company that requires more than just a 10 minute Google search to find out. Brownie points if you can share some ideas that you'd bring into the role - if they're open to hearing them. Focus on the actual work you'll be doing and not on other factors like benefits or salary or work schedule.

Question - 21:

Tell me does the company have a slip-seat policy?

Ans:

"Slip-seat" means that when a driver has time off, another driver may take his place driving his route. That means another driver behind the wheel of your truck, which can make some drivers uncomfortable. It's better to know whether you will be subject to this before you begin.

View All Answers

Question - 22:

Can you please explain how would you describe the application and interview process?

Ans:

Basically you go into any office, and I think they're all franchised, so you just go in. Some do it online, most do it by paperwork still. Just go in and get a paper application, fill it out, and take it in, talk to a manager. If they like the way you act and look and the application looks, then they call you back and then you talk to them again. If you can pass a physical and drug test, then you have the job and they start training you.

Question - 23:

Tell us why do you wish to leave your present job as Truck Driver?

Ans:

No matter what you say, do not mention negative things about your employer, neither should you mention anything about more money being the reason. The reason is simple; if you are leaving a company because of money to come to theirs, you will definitely leave them to move on to another if it promises a better paycheck. Your best bet is to say it on responsibility and challenge and how your previous position was challenging you enough. Indicate that you yearn for more responsibility and how what you have to offer outweighs the responsibility and challenge posed by your former position.

Question - 30:

Tell me am I unloading my own truck in this job?

Ans:

Some companies pay the drivers to load and unload your freight, while others pay people known as "lumpers" to do it for you. Whether or not you are able or willing to do this part of the job is pretty important, and you should know going in whether you're doing the heavy lifting, or if others are doing it for you.

View All Answers

Question - 31:

Explain me how does this position contribute to your goals for this department/company?

Ans:

You're mindful of the fact that your role will be a part of a larger whole. You're forward thinking enough to wonder how you can contribute. And you're sensitive enough to the company's goals to see how it fits into their big picture or bottom line. Bonus points if you can flip the question: just name a few of the goals for the company you already know line up with this position and then ask how else a new hire in that position might contribute or accelerate that impact?

View All Answers

Question - 32:

Can you please explain what other advice would you give to a job seeker looking to gain employment?

Ans:

There's different types of people you're going to work with everywhere you go. Just be patient and remember you're there to do a job. Other than that, it's good pay and it'll keep you busy and keep you in good physical condition.

Question - 35:

Tell me which routes will I be driving?

Ans:

You want to know what your typical routes will look like. This is a common question to ask, and you should be immensely curious about it. You may want to ask this question first.

View All Answers

Question - 36:

Please explain what is your client service philosophy?

Ans:

Really, you should try to ascertain this before the interview. But there are ways to ask about this that make you seem customer service oriented and proactive. As well as sensitive to balancing your company's needs versus that of your client.

View All Answers

Question - 37:

Tell me what sort of salary are you looking for as Truck Driver?

Ans:

Note that whenever you are going for an interview, this question may be asked. Before going, try to find out what the average salary for someone holding that position in that industry is paid. This would help prepare you for what is in front of you.

Do not forget that this is only an interview and you haven't been offered the job, so do not go on negotiating. Just state something within the range you have researched and move on. Whatever you do, do not sell yourself short.

View All Answers

Question - 38:

Tell us what are your weaknesses as Truck Driver?

Ans:

Turn this question into a strength question in disguise. For instance, say something like "I do not like not being challenged at work" or you could mention a weakness that has nothing to do with the job and that you can overcome with training. This way, you end up turning this potentially tricky question into a positive.

Sometimes, you may be asked about certain challenges you faced in your previous position. If you are asked this question, lean towards the problem that happened early in your carrier and that you were able to solve. Do not try to blame others, just identify the problem and the role you played in solving it.

Question - 42:

Tell us what is your policy on home time?

Ans:

When you're an over-the-road driver, you're going to be spending a lot of time away from home. It's only fair for you to know how long you will be home in between. Also, be sure to get a clarification on defining "a day"; for instance, if you are promised two days of home time after a week-long trip, is that two full days, or the remainder of the day after you return to the terminal, then one day after? Some companies will not offer to tell you this information.

Question - 43:

Do you know what are some of the intangible qualities of successful team members here?

Ans:

You want to know what that certain je ne sais quoi might be that helps employees of this company excel. Your interviewer might be eager to talk about the soft skills involved in the job-which are rarely asked about in interviews. It's also a great sneaky way to get a sense of culture and what the company will value most to see if you'd be a good or bad fit.

View All Answers

Question - 44:

Explain me what recent accomplishments have meant the most to you and your team, and why?

Ans:

Bonus points if you can cite some of these accomplishments, or have done enough research to say there have been many. This question allows you to show off your excellent listening skills. Look! It's not all about you! You're a great and generous colleague! Plus, people love to talk about themselves. It's a great icebreaker, even for midway or almost-all-the-way through an interview.

View All Answers

Question - 45:

Tell us what is your greatest accomplishment as Truck Driver?

Ans:

This is just like the "what is your greatest strength?" question and should be treated similarly. You should pick accomplishments that show that you have the qualities the company is looking for and this adds value to you as a candidate for the position you are interviewing for. You may have achieved a lot over the years but for the sake of the interview, pick only the relevant ones

View All Answers

Question - 46:

Can you tell me what questions did the interviewer ask during the job interview?

Ans:

They basically asked under a stressful situation, can you handle it; do you have the availability to work strange hours, you don't have kids at home, you got to be off by 3, you get them from school, or you don't have another job you have to be at or anything like that or school. They need somebody with open availability.

View All Answers

Question - 49:

Tell me your greatest strength as Truck Driver?

Ans:

This is your big chance to brag, so take it by the reins. Pick a skill that is relevant to the job you're interviewing for based upon the research you've done. Emphasize how you used that skill to succeed in your current or former role, and try to share that gift through the words of someone else. For example, did your last boss tell you that you're great with details? It's more powerful to share your gifts through the words of others. Describe how you plan to use that skill in the role you're interviewing for if given the chance.

Question - 50:

Tell us why do you want to work for us as Truck Driver?

Ans:

Here, they just want to know how motivated you are about the position or if you are just there for the pay. They want to ascertain that you would form an important part of the company. You have to show them that you are willing to be part of the company and would do all you can to ensure you and the company grows together.

View All Answers

Question - 51:

Explain me how were you notified that you received the job?

Ans:

It didn't take too long. Of course my experience might have been different, but only a day or two after I turned the application in. I was lucky, I got to speak with someone who was in the office that day. That isn't always the case but when I turned in the paperwork, somebody was there for me to talk to. They called me back I think it was a day or two later, and I went back in the next day. It was about almost a week from when I first went in to when I was actually hired on.

Question - 55:

Tell us what type of equipment does the company use?

Ans:

Again, another important question that both answers a question about your potential comfort and productivity, and about the company itself. Are the trucks old? If so, they may be perpetually breaking down and harming your ability to be productive. If they continually spend on new equipment, that may be a good sign. Also, will you have a sleeper on the truck? Will you have an air-ride suspension? When you're sitting in the truck all day, these are potentially important questions.
