Question - 10:

Tell me Is there any minimum work experience required for B1 visa for USA?

Ans:

I attended the interview at chennai on 1 Aug 2011 for a B1 visa. I have only one year experience and i got my VISA approved. So its not the experience or the job that matters. I think it is your presentation and the confidence with which you face the Visa officer at the interview. Remember, the Visa officer, is asking you all the questions with constant doubt, if you will return to india, at the end of your assignment. I would suggest you pick up the list of questions asked to the different categories of interviewees and practice answering them loud and clear, before you go for the interview next time. Best of luck next time.

Question - 15:

I got a B1-visa from a company and now i have changed my company does this affect the status of the visa?

Ans:

No. It does not change the status of the visa. The B1 visa is given to a person rather than a company.

Question - 16:

I want to go USA on B1 visa but i am not getting sponsorship from anyone my question is how can i get sponsor/invitation from US?

Ans:

If you are working under any client and you want to go for their business improvement, then you need to ask them to write a letter to your company inviting you to US for business discussion. Other than this, you can not have a invitation from any where and if you get also....it will not be accepted.

Question - 17:

I was denied for visa by US embassy. Can i apply for another interview?

Ans:

Can you provide more information about what kind of visa you were going for and why were you denied? You may not want to waste your money if there is no chance of success in February. I think sometimes agencies will send people to embassy even though the work petition is almost over and the embassy will not approve them.
